EDITOR'S NOTE

RAICHU, THE EVOLUTION OF PIKACHU

One of the most underrated Pokémon of all time is Raichu. Not only is it the first evolution of Pikachu, but its electrical power is so amazing (over 100,000 volts of electricity) that it can take down some of the biggest Pokémon around.

Inside this issue we take look at Raichu's intense power and its appearances in the Pokémon Diamond and Pearl DS games, TV series, and trading cards. We'll also give you some secret tips for adding Raichu to one of your Pokémon DS games. Check out the special feature on page 15!

For those of you who are playing Pokémon Platinum DS and have collected all eight of the Sinnoh badges, we have some new challenges and adventures in store for you. Our Platinum DS expert, Alex Lucard, has come up with list of more things you can do to take your gameplay to the next level. After you become the Pokémon Champion, there's still plenty more for you to explore (p. 12).

Are you collecting the new Platinum trading cards? We've included Part 3 of our continuing pictorial price guide of Pokémon Platinum cards (p. 28). Once you see the cards, you can then head over to our contest page (p. 25) where you can enter for your chance to win an entire booster box of Pokémon Platinum cards!

In addition to all of the Pokémon coverage, we have features on two very popular online kids games: Wizard101 and Freaky Creatures. Both of these games have been recommended by kids of all ages. Plus, we're giving away 100 exclusive Wizard 101 in-game items (an Amaranthine Staff) to 100 lucky winners. Don't forget to enter (p. 11). Your chances of winning in this contest are very good!

Enjoy!

POKÉMON PLATINUM VERSION

SO YOU'VE BEATEN POKÉMON PLATINUM

YOU'RE THE POKÉMON CHAMPION.
NOW WHAT?

By Alex Lucard

Okay. You've collected all eight of Sinnoh's badges. You've beaten your rival. You've taken down the Elite Four. Even the Pokémon Champion Cynthia has fallen before your might. So now what? You can still play the game, but what's the point? Haven't you already done everything, been everywhere, and caught everything?

NOPE!

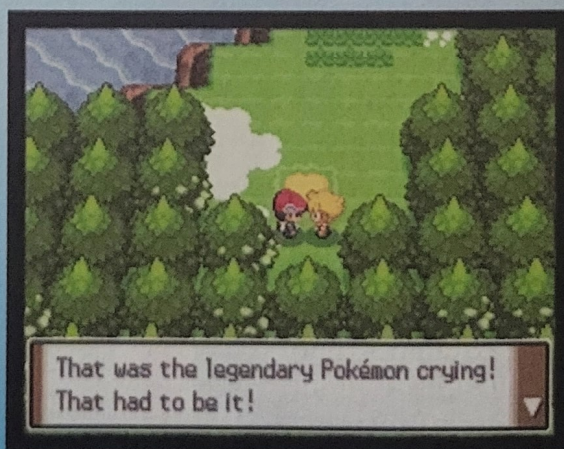

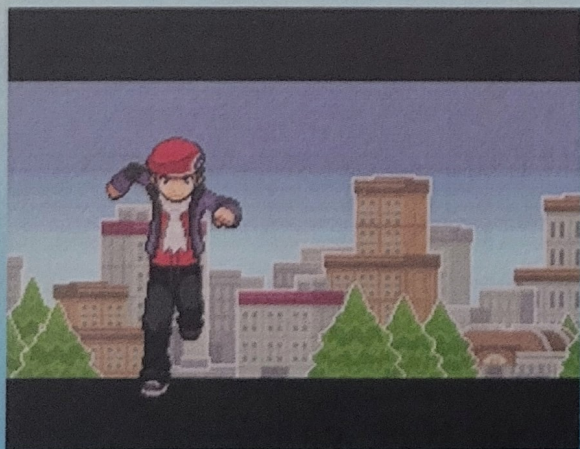

In fact, much like every other Pokémon game, beating the game is just the beginning. There's still a lot out there for you even after you become the Pokémon Champion. Let's take a quick look at what else awaits you in Sinnoh.

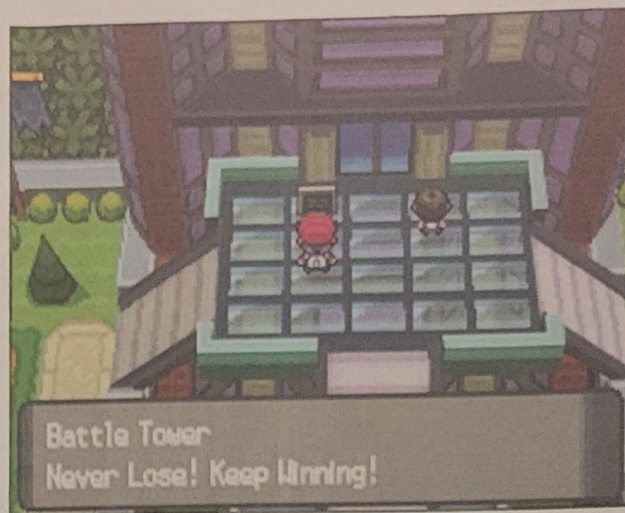

1. Finish Your Sinnoh Dex!

Although the Sinnoh Dex increased from 150 to 210 Pokémon in Platinum, that still leaves over 180 Pokémon that you can't encounter or catch until after you've beaten the game. In order to catalog all these other Pokémon, you need to get the National Dex from Professor Oak. To get the National Dex, you have to complete the Sinnoh Dex. Thankfully the Sinnoh Dex only requires you to SEE each Pokémon rather than capture it, unlike in the first three generations of Pokémon.

If you encounter every Trainer in the game (including Team Galactic members, Gym Leaders, and so on), you'll see 207 of the Pokémon you need to catch. That leaves three Pokémon: Unown, Rotom, and Manaphy. Now, you can encounter these Pokémon by trading them over from Ruby or Sapphire, or you can find them in wild. Unown can be found in the Solaceon Ruins as long as you get to the bottom of the Ruins without retreating (using an Escape Rope or Teleport for example). Manaphy can be encountered on Route 212, but it's not in the way you think. If you go into Mr. Backlot's mansion, you can read a book containing information on Manaphy and fill your Pokédex that way. Another option is to trade over the Manaphy you earned from Pokémon Ranger: Shadows Over Almia. Finally there is Rotom. Rotom is in the same place you could encounter him in Pokémon Diamond & Pearl, but now you can finally catch him before you beat the game. Just travel to the Old Chateau after 8pm and go to a particular television and Rotom will battle you.

Remember, you can encounter all three of these Pokémon before you beat the game, allowing you to finish the Sinnoh Dex as you beat the game.

2. Weekly Rival Battles

Even though you've proven yourself to be the greatest Pokémon Trainer in Sinnoh, your Rival still thinks he can beat you. Every weekend he will be waiting for you at the Top Trainer Cafe. It's a great source of experience and money and your rival will steadily grow in power. Will your rival ever be able to beat you?

3. The Battle Frontier

Are you ready for a real challenge? Then make your way to the Battle Frontier. Making its triumphant return from Pokémon Emerald, the Battle Frontier boasts five different kinds of challenges and a sixth region called Battle Shops. Let's take a look at each of these areas and what you can expect to encounter here.

Battle Shops

When you win a battle in the Battle Frontier, you earn Battle Points. You can spend these Battle Points at any of the three different stalls available to you. The first stall is The Training Stall. Here you can pick up vitamin items such as Protein, HP Up, Carbos, and more. You can also pick up items for your Pokémon to hold, ranging from a Razor Fang (which increases the chance that the defending Pokémon might flinch) to a Power Lens (this lowers a Pokémon's speed but increases its EV for Special Attacks). The second stall is called The Move Stall and here you can spend Battle Points on TMs! There are fifteen TMs that you can purchase here like Energy Ball, Shadow Ball, X-Scissor, and Dragon Pulse. Not bad! Finally there is The Scratch Card Stall. Here you can spend your Battle Points on a Lottery Card. You get three cards per Battle Point spend. Will you win rare and valuable items, or will you walk away empty-handed? You won't know until you try!

Battle Arcade

The Battle Arcade is in the southeast of the Battle Frontier. Here you can choose between single or double battles. If you choose the single route, you can take three Pokémon with you; if you choose the double format, you get four. Before the battles, you will be taken to a screen with a list of different possible effects. These effects can either be positive (like your opponent loses hit points or all of your Pokémon get a stat increase) or they can be negative (all of your Pokémon are paralyzed or lose three levels). You'll have to press the button at the exact moment the cursor is on an effect you want. Otherwise you may end up with something awful.

Battle Castle

The Battle Castle also gives you a choice between single or double battles. Once in the Battle Castle, you are unable to heal your Pokémon. Instead, after each battle you will earn Castle Points, which are basically Battle Points you can only use in the Battle Castle. You can spend these points to heal your Pokémon, recharge their power points, or even raise your rank. Raising your rank opens up the ability to purchase rare items for your Pokémon to hold. You can even spend points to take a look at your opponent's Pokémon and prepare for the next battle, or raise or lower their levels with enough points. Nice!

Battle Factory

In the northeast of the Battle Frontier lies the Battle Factory. Here you are unable to use your own Pokémon. You and the other Trainers you will encounter can only use Rental Pokémon. This means you can't plan any real strategies around what your opponents might have. You have to choose your Pokémon from a limited selection. Be sure to check the stats though; just because a Pokémon looks awesome or is normally quite tough, that doesn't mean they will be in this format. Double battles might be a better format than single battles when you first try the Battle Factory as you can attempt to make complimentary teams to make it easier for you. After each battle you can trade in a Pokémon for one your opponent had. If there is a Pokémon that just isn't working out for you, this is the time to discard it. If there was a very tough Pokémon used by your opponent, you should definitely trade for it as it will be helpful in your further battles.

Battle Hall

As always you have a choice between single and double battles. The gimmick here however is that you get only a single Pokémon (or two for doubles), making these battles very quick. Then you are given a list of all Pokémon types that you can choose from to battle, although you cannot see what specific Pokémon it will be. You have to plan the order in which you battle carefully. For example, let's say your Pokémon is a Machop and you decide to battle a Normal type so that you can have an advantage. That Normal Pokémon might turn out to be a Girafarig who is a Normal/Psychic dual type... there goes your advantage. Remember to think of all the possibilities you might encounter in order to protect yourself. A great Pokémon to try this battle out with first is Espeon as it is super fast, there are only a few types that are super effective against Psychic, and it can learn moves of many different types, such as the Dark move Bite. With its high speed, you have a strong chance of weathering out the battles here.

Battle Tower

Finally we have the Battle Tower, which is the most straightforward of all the competitions. It's flat out normal battling against opponents until you fall or you finally encounter the Battle Tower Frontier Brain. You don't have to worry about any gimmicks, rules, or crazy challenges – just pick your three best Pokémon (or four for Double Battles) and do your best.

There's Still More!

Even though we've run out of room for this column, there are still many other things you can do. There's the Top Trainer Cafe, rematches against the Elite Four – who will have even more powerful Pokémon than last time – and a ton of side quests and activities. With Pokémon Platinum, the journey only ends when you want it to!

RAICHU

THE ELECTRIC
MOUSE POKÉMON

The Evolution of Everyone's Favorite Pokémon

By Sean Cooper

With Pikachu constantly in the spotlight it's easy to overlook its evolution, Raichu. However, despite Pikachu's fame, Raichu is a very powerful Electric type Pokémon that would be an asset to any team. As Ash has found out on many occasions, it's no easy task for a Pikachu to defeat a Raichu – Raichu is one tough customer! The big question is, if you have a Pikachu, is it worth evolving it into a Raichu? Keep reading to find out!

POKÉMON PROFILE

Despite its small stature, Raichu is able to hold over 100,000 volts of electricity within its body. This enables it to unleash powerful Electric attacks at any foe foolish enough to stand in its way. Raichu is an aggressive Pokémon, especially when it has too much electricity within its body. To fix the electricity overcharge, it uses its tail to ground itself and disperse the excess electricity. You can tell a Raichu's electricity level based on its body language – if both of ears are standing up straight then it's fully charged, but if its tail is standing up straight then it's charging by gathering electricity from its surrounding.

POKÉMON DIAMOND & PEARL

The easiest way to obtain Raichu is by transferring it from a prior game via Pal Park. If that method isn't an option, the only way to obtain Raichu in Pokémon Diamond & Pearl is by evolving a Pikachu using the Thunderstone. In case you're wondering, the easiest way to obtain the Thunderstone is by digging in the Sinnoh Underground. In order to obtain a Pikachu, you can transfer it from a prior game or catch it in the Trophy Garden. It's interesting to note that the only game where Raichu can be caught in the wild is Pokémon Red & Blue – all other games require you to evolve it from a Pikachu.

Similar to its pre-evolutions, Pikachu and Pichu, Raichu is a pure Electric type – it's strong against Flying, Steel, and Electric types and weak against only Ground types. Pikachu is one of only twelve Pokémon to possess the ability Static. This ability is useful because it has a 30% chance of paralyzing an opponent that physically strikes it. Static also increases your chances by 150% of encountering an Electric type in the wild when Raichu is first in your party. In terms of stats, Raichu's highest stats are Speed, Attack and Special Attack, while its lowest stats are HP and Defense.

In terms of battle strategy, Raichu is best for dealing a lot of damage – it won't last long due to its lackluster HP and defensive stats. A word of caution: avoid Ground types at all cost – one Earthquake and Raichu is a goner! In terms of move set, the first move I would select for Raichu is Volt Tackle. Volt Tackle has 100% accuracy and deals a whopping 120 base damage points – just keep in mind that it deals a third of the damage back to Raichu as recoil. The second move I would select is Thunder Wave – this move is useful for paralyzing your opponent in order to make their life miserable. As for Raichu's third move, Surf is ideal since you'll be able to deal with Ground and Rock types. Just keep in mind that obtaining a Surfing Pikachu isn't easy – the easiest method is by winning one as a gift in the Stargazer Colosseum in Pokémon Battle Revolution.

The last move I recommend is Thunderbolt. I know Raichu already has a powerful Electric move in Volt Tackle, but Raichu's move set is really limited – it's useful to have a move that doesn't deal recoil damage.

PIKACHU OR RAICHU?

The decision between having a Pikachu and evolving it into a Raichu isn't as clear-cut as it may seem. While Raichu has far superior stats to Pikachu, Pikachu possesses one clear advantage –

Pikachu is able to use the Light Ball to double its Attack and Special Attack. The Light Ball is very hard to obtain – it's only found in previous generations. If you don't have the Light Ball, you should evolve your Pikachu into a Raichu. However if you have the Light Ball, you should think about your main purpose for Pikachu and Raichu – if you want a Pokémon that will do a lot of damage before going down quickly then go with Pikachu, but if you want a Pokémon to last you a while then go with Raichu. The choice is yours, but just keep in mind that Pikachu's other stats are really low – it has a max HP of only 274 and max Defense of only 174 – don't expect it to last very long.

POKÉMON BATTLE REVOLUTION

Raichu makes a splash on the Nintendo Wii. It can douse opposing Pokémon with a powerful Surf attack or electrocute them with Volt Tackle. Regardless of the moves you choose for Raichu, this Electric Pokémon is bound to have an impact in Pokémon Battle Revolution!

ANIME DEBUT

Surprisingly, Raichu appears quite infrequently in the anime – you'd think it would be a lot more popular due to Pikachu. Raichu is best known for its first appearance in the anime in the episode Electric Shock

Showdown, where Ash's Pikachu faces off against Lt. Surge's Raichu. This episode is good because it shows the ruthless side of Raichu – it left Pikachu in rough shape after a severe beating. However, Pikachu perseveres and defeats its evolved adversary. This episode goes to show you that evolving your Pokémon isn't always the best choice. Raichu's next major role is in the Pikachu mini-movie, Pikachu's Vacation. This Raichu is mean and nasty, but in the end it befriends Pikachu. Raichu recently appears in the Diamond & Pearl episode Pika and Goliath!, an episode quite similar to the St. Lurge episode. The best part is when Raichu performs Volt Tackle. History repeats itself, as Ash's Pikachu is once again victorious over a Raichu. Overall, Raichu isn't portrayed that well in the anime – it's a shame that Pikachu always upsets it because it's a perfectly formidable Pokémon that shouldn't be taken lightly.

TRADING CARD GAME

Raichu is a decent card in Pokémon TCG. The Fossil Raichu card is an example of that. This Raichu card has 90HP, which is pretty decent. Raichu only has one attack, Gigashock, which is a unique attack that does 30 damage points to your opponent while doing 10 damage points to up to three benched Pokémon. However, this attack isn't very good because it requires a whopping four Lightning energy cards and only does a negligible amount of damage.

The other Raichu card I'll review is Mysterious Treasures Raichu. As with Fossil Raichu, this Raichu card possesses 90 HP. Raichu's first attack, Electromagnetic Induction, is very useful – it allows you to instantly attach up to two Lightning energy cards to Raichu. This attack works in tandem with Raichu's second attack, Explosive Thunder, which does 30 damage points times the quantity of Lightning energy cards attached to it – imagine the possibilities! As long as you have plenty of Lightning energy in your deck, Raichu will be one tough card to deal with.

RADIANT RAICHU

Despite living in Pikachu's shadow its entire life, Raichu is a reliable Pokémon that would be a welcome addition on any team. If you have a Pikachu without the Light Ball, the choice is clear – evolve it into Raichu. The main downside to Raichu is that it's not very versatile – your best bet is to do as much damage to your opponent as possible before going down in glory. As for the anime, hopefully Raichu will be shown for the powerful Pokémon that it is – I'd be nice to see a Raichu come out on top against a Pikachu for once.

SHEDINJA!

THERE ARE MANY GHOST
POKEMON, BUT ONLY ONE
UNDEAD ONE!

BY ALEX LUCARD

Shedinja was introduced with Pokémon Ruby and Sapphire. This unique Pokémon can never be caught. Instead it joins your team when a Nincada evolves into a Ninjask and you have an extra slot in your active roster open (with Pokémon Diamond, Pearl and Platinum, this has changed to also require a free Poké Ball as well. Boo). It's a bit of a complicated process to add Shedinja to your collection of Pokémon, but it's worth it. Since Shedinja has so many qualities that are unique to it, we're going to spend this month looking at this strange Pokémon and its short but intricate history.

- Shedinja is a portmanteau of the words "shed" and "ninja." This name refers to the fact that a Shedinja is the discarded husk of a Ninjask. In Japan, Shedinja's name is Nukenin. Nukenin is a word for a ninja that has no master or clan. This is similar to a ronin (masterless) samurai and it fits Shedinja perfectly.

- Shedinja is a Bug/Ghost dual type Pokémon. It is the only Pokémon with this combination.

- Shedinja is a genderless Pokémon, which is usually a trait that only belongs to Legendary Pokémon.

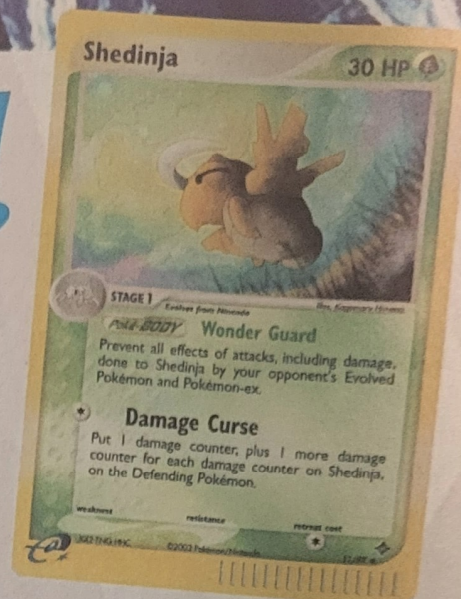

- Although Shedinja is a fully evolved Pokémon, it has the lowest base stat total out of all final evolutions. In fact, a Shedinja actually has lower stats than its base form of Ninjask. It also has the lowest base Hit Point stat out of all Pokémon in the entire game with only a single Hit Point to its name. The fact Shedinja is so potentially weak compared to many other Pokémon is what keeps many people from using it.

- Shedinja's one real strength is its Pokémon Ability. This power, known as Wonder Guard, makes Shedinja invulnerable to all attacks except for those that are super effective against it. Because Shedinja has such a low Hit Point total, attacks will either do no damage at all, or one hit KO Shedinja. This means you need to keep your Shedinja away from Dark, Fire, Flying, Ghost, and Rock attacks. Even if you do this though, you still have to worry about weather effects and status conditions. Because of all these drawbacks, Shedinja is a very hard Pokémon to field in Trainer vs. Trainer battles.

- Shedinja's only real strong point is its Attack score. This means you'll want to focus on attacks that play off this strength. Sadly, because many Ghost attacks have moved from using the Attack stat to Special Attack, Shedinja is severely weakened in D/P and Platinum. The only decent move that Shedinja learns that takes advantage of his stats is Shadow Sneak, which is a Ghost version of Quick Attack. That's... kind of sad. However, there are non-damage dealing attacks Shedinja can learn without TMs that are still useful like Confuse Ray and Grudge. Still, every Pokémon needs a decent attack using one of its types, so you're going to want to track down the Shadow Claw and X-Scissor TMs if you want a Shedinja that can do decent damage.

- Shedinja first appeared in the Pokémon TCG with the EX Dragon set of cards. Here Shedinja was a holographic foil card and a Grass type Pokémon, even though most Ghost types have been Psychic Pokémon in the TCG. This Shedinja has 30 Hit Points and a single attack known as Damage Curse. Damage Curse deals at least one damage counter (10 points) to Shedinja's opponent and it is unblockable. It also deals an extra counter for each counter of damage currently on Shedinja, which means that it can do a maximum of 30 damage per turn. Shedinja also has a Poké-BODY that is named Wonder Guard. Although this Wonder Guard is different from the video game Pokémon Ability with the same name, it's actually more effective. This Wonder Guard prevents all damage and effects to Shedinja from an evolved Pokémon or any Pokémon-EX. This means a Magikarp can take out Shedinja, but a Charizard or Torterra is utterly useless against it. This is a great little move that forces your opponent to completely change their strategy and makes Shedinja worth putting into your deck from time to time.

- Shedinja made its next TCG appearance with EX Deoxys. Here Shedinja returned to the usual Ghost in the video game = Psychic type in the TCG format. Although this Shedinja is decidedly inferior to the EX Dragon one, it's still worth taking a look at. This Shedinja has 50 Hit Points, a single attack, and a Poké-BODY. The attack is called Extra Curse. Extra Curse puts two damage counters on the defending Pokémon, or four counters if it is a Pokémon-EX. Once again, it's interesting to see how Shedinja is once again designed to counter Pokémon-EX cards. The Poké-BODY however is very different. Empty Shell is a pretty useless ability as all it does is prevent your opponent from taking a Prize card when Shedinja is knocked out. Considering this Shedinja lacks the invulnerability aspects of EX Dragon's Shedinja, it will be knocked out quickly and almost as an afterthought. My advice is to stick with the Grass type Shedinja from EX Dragon.

- The third and latest appearance of Shedinja in the Pokémon TCG (as of the writing of this article) is with Diamond & Pearl: Legends Awakened. This Shedinja is back to being a Grass type card and it boasts the most Hit Points for a Shedinja so far – a “whopping” 60! Shedinja's attack is called Curse and Deceive. When you using this attack, you put three damage counters on the defending Pokémon. If Shedinja has any damage counters on it, it is now confused. This is a pretty good attack, especially as it requires only a single colorless energy card. Just team Shedinja up with a Pokémon that can heal and you'll have a nice slow damage dealer for your team. This Shedinja also has a Poké-BODY named Resent. Resent is a pretty powerful move but instead of being designed to counter EX Pokémon, it's meant to hurt those players who use a ton of the same Pokémon in their deck. If Shedinja is Knocked Out, Resent deals four damage counters not only to the attacking Pokémon, but it deals four counters to any other Pokémon on your opponent's roster with the same name. Ouch! Although its true potential will rarely be utilized, resent can be very effective and a momentum killer.

- Shedinja has only appeared in two episodes of the Pokémon anime, and this was a two part episode that allowed Misty and May to meet finally. This two part episode revolved around a man named Hanzou who wanted to steal Misty's Togepi so that he could enter the mysterious Mirage Kingdom. Hanzou's main Pokémon was a powerful Shedinja, but it was eventually taken out by Misty's new secret weapon – a Gyarados! Shedinja's first (and only) appearance in the anime was an important one, but in the end, it was overshadowed by involved the return of Misty, Misty's new outfit, the evolution of Togepi into Togetic, and Misty releasing Togetic so it could protect the Mirage Kingdom.

SECRETS OF EVOLUTION

PLATINUM

PART 3

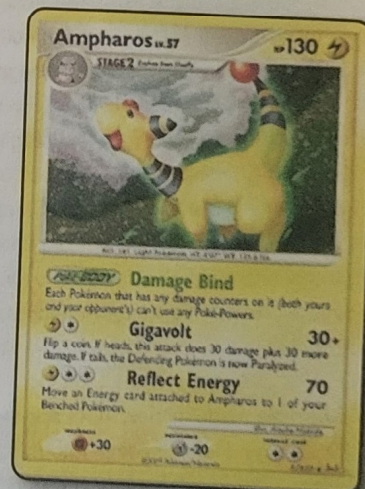

Back to (no) basics!

By Michael Lucas

Welcome back, Trainers! This month we're looking at one last batch of Pokemon from the new Platinum expansion. Unlike the last two issues, where I spent the majority of the articles reviewing basic Pokemon and their Lv. X forms, this month I'll be looking at three Stage 2's. You could say my choices were as easy as 1, 2, 3 - they're the first three cards out of the 127-card set. With cards like these, we won't be completely back in the era of Big Basic Pokemon anytime soon - let's take a look!

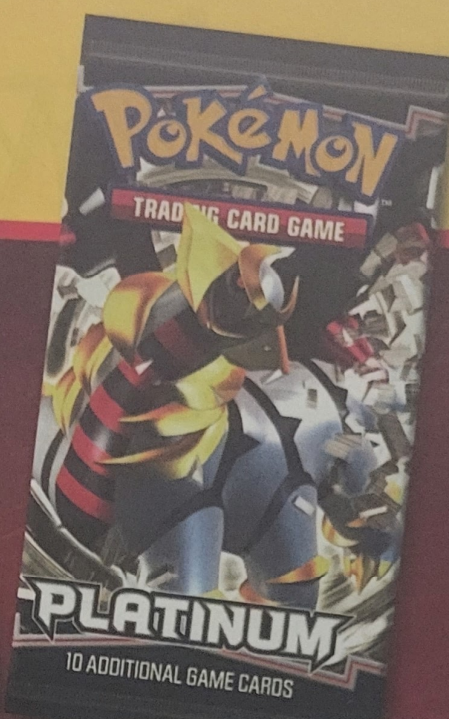

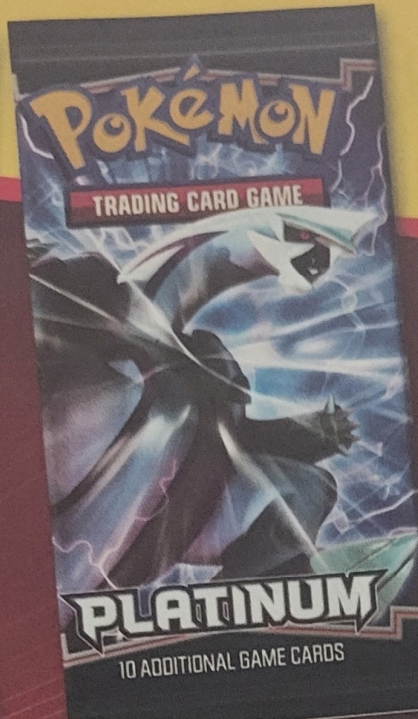

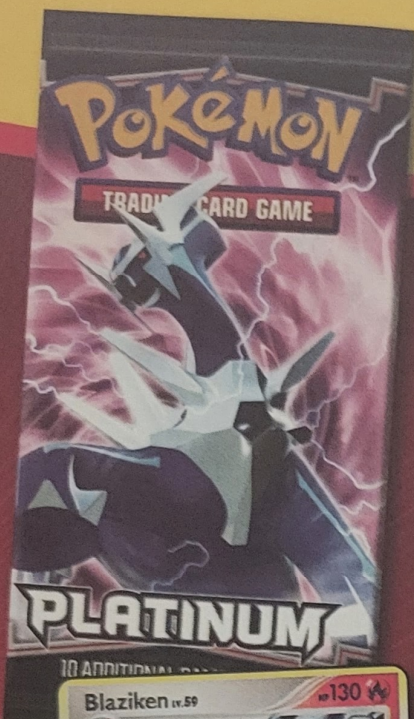

Ampharos (#1/127): Poke-Power Paralysis!

Most good electric types have a way to paralyze opposing Pokemon to stop them from retaliating; Ampharos here has two! Damage Bind locks out any Pokemon from using its Poke-Power if it has at least one damage counter on it; with how many cards deal damage across the board, that's usually not difficult to accomplish. In addition to that, Ampharos can use two energy to do 60 damage, or 30 damage and paralysis with Gigavolt. While I'd usually prefer that attack over Reflect Energy, sometimes that guarantee of 70 damage and a knockout warrants attaching the third energy only to move it to a benched Pokemon to satisfy the secondary effect of the attack. If you're using a Pokemon that does even the smallest amount of bench damage, pairing it with Ampharos can be a way to make sure your opponent won't be using any Poke-Powers for a long time!

Blastoise (#2/127): Pumping the well

Who says grass-types are the only ones that can attach multiple energy in one turn? The Base Set Blastoise's Rain Dance power was very first Pokemon that allowed a Trainer to do so. Instead of coming from the hand, the energy cards this Blastoise needs have to come from the top of the deck; Dig Well lets a Trainer attach extra energy milled from the deck while losing other revealed cards. Aqua Press can pile on the damage even if Blastoise itself only has two water energy on him; Double Launcher can pick off an opponent's bench, albeit at the cost of discarding two energy. A deck that packs lots of energy and can get out multiple Blastoses at the same time can end a game very quickly! If you want to blaze through your deck as quickly as possible, try a Blastoise build!

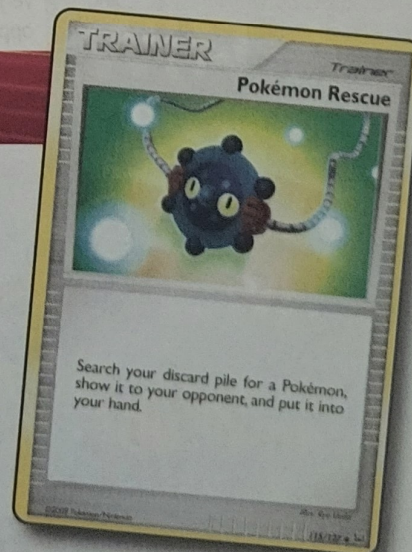

Blaziken (#3/127): The new-age Charizard

Platinum's Blaziken is everything the older Charizard cards should have been. Fire Spin no longer requires four attached energy; while Blaziken still needs to discard two energy to do 100 damage, Clutch ensures that it won't be helpless and unable to deal damage the next turn. Fire Breath is amazing; being able to instantly burn a Pokémon at will is great on its own, but combining it with Clutch to prevent a retreat just piles on the damage. With a low retreat cost and a good second evolution line of Pokémon to pair Blaziken with, the fire-type is once again a force to be reckoned with!

Trainer Corner: Pokémon Rescue (#115/127)

Pokémon Rescue is a simple card; a 1:1 trade for any Pokémon card in the discard pile. This is great not only for getting back a single Pokémon who was knocked out earlier, but also getting cards that were discarded by other effects (like Blastoise's Dig Well.) Being able to use the discard pile as a resource opens up your options tremendously, and if your opponent isn't playing a Galactic deck, this card's almost always a safe pick to include in your deck.

That's it for the Platinum reviews, Trainers! Be sure to pick up the next issue, where we'll be looking at new game-changing cards from the next expansion! Until next time, play hard and play fair!

Wizard 101™

Chances are, you've already watched the television commercials, but what do you really know about the magic of duels in Wizard101?

With almost two million registered players, the runaway hit brings collectible spell card magic into an online virtual world where you watch your spells come to life when you duel opponents! Have you ever wondered what it would look like to cast a Ninja Pig or an Ice Wyvern spell? Well now you can find out and play for free by visiting www.Wizard101.com.

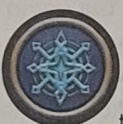

When you first enter the world of Wizard101, you will be in Wizard City – home of the Ravenwood School of Magical Arts and the seven schools of magic.

You can choose any of the seven schools of magic as your focus:

• FIRE

Pyromancers use Incantations to dominate and convince Fire creatures to do their bidding. Fire magic consists of powerful spells that do damage over time to your opponent.

• ICE

Thaumaturges use Chants to bargain or plead with Ice creatures to serve them. Ice magic is very protective and reduces the damage your opponents spells deal to you or your allies.

• MYTH

Conjurers use Naming to summon beasts of legend by memorizing and calling out their True Name. Myth magic consists of many different spells that summon minions to help you defeat opponents.

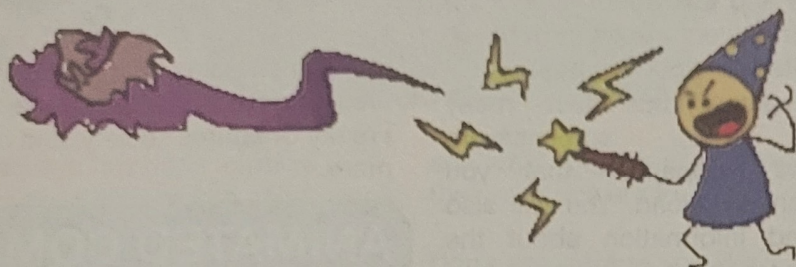

• STORM

Diviners use Verses to charm, enthrall or hypnotize creatures to help them. Storm magic is incredibly powerful and deals a lot of damage, but it is not very accurate and won't always hit.

A New World for Collectible Card Game Players to Explore

• LIFE

Theurgists use Songs to breathe life and spirit into a vessel. Life magic has the best healing spells that restore your health and the health of your allies in a duel.

• DEATH

Necromancers use Whispers to strengthen their will, and draw on the power of courage to channel their own fears out of themselves and at their opponents. Death magic steals health from your opponents and gives a portion of it back to you.

• BALANCE

Sorcerers use Transmutation to blend the forces of the other schools for their spells. Balance magic can change the rules of combat to favor you and all your allies.

When you have finished choosing a school of magic as your focus, you can assemble your spell card deck – a Wizard's most potent weapon when confronting opponents. Your spell card deck will define what spells you can cast, and how many times you can cast them in a duel.

Look in the next issue to read about spell deck creation and strategies!

FREAKY CREATURES

Looking for a new way to play with your toys?

by Thomas Nelson

COMMUNITY

Playing with your toys has never been like playing with Freaky Creatures collectible action figures. Freaky Creatures come to life virtually on your home computer, where you can customize, care for, train, and challenge other players' creatures in an on-line universe.

The Freaky Creatures web site is where trainers get together outside of the game and talk about everything from what powers to use in battle to what strategies work the best. You'll find mini games, the latest Freaky Creatures news, screensavers and wallpapers that you can download. You will also find information about the creatures, parts and powers in the game, bios of the people and aliens that make up the Freaky Creatures society, and much more.

ANIMATED COMIC

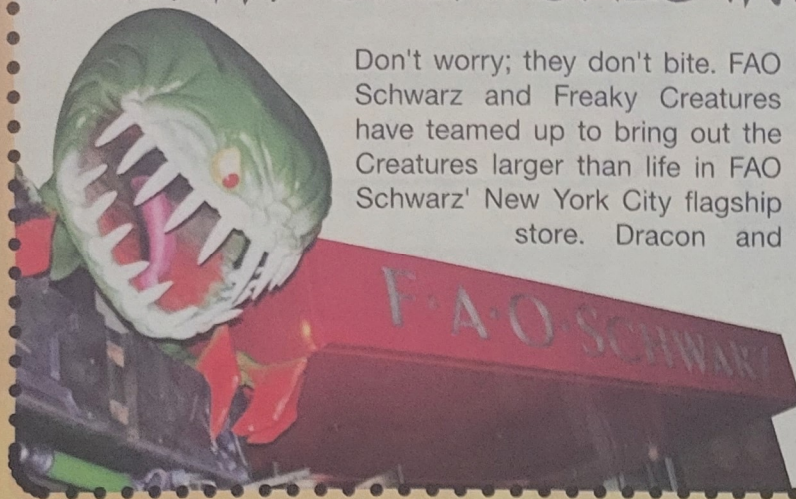

Interested in taking a trip to the far reaches of the galaxy and meeting some alien races and freaky creatures? The animated comic is where you can do just that.

In the latest issue Alex Stargazer is having a pretty bad day. He woke up late for school, he got picked on by his coach, and he just found

FREAKY CREATURES INVADES FAO SCHWARZ

Don't worry; they don't bite. FAO Schwarz and Freaky Creatures have teamed up to bring out the Creatures larger than life in FAO Schwarz' New York City flagship store. Dracon and Trappern tower over players as they experience the fun of battling creatures against each other, and pick out which of the creatures are coming home with them to start their collection. Sadly, the giant Dracon and Trappern are not for sale. (We already asked.)

out his dad has gone missing. Alexx must venture into deep space to find his father, with the help of his clever friend Miri, and his faithful Dracon Azroc. Alexx' story comes to life from panel to panel as characters and creatures appear and animate with the action.

TRADING

How do you play a game? Do you do as much damage as possible, or do you defend yourself until the opponent wears down?

Picking the right power during a battle can mean the difference between victory and defeat. Knowing what powers to use is important, but knowing how to get the powers you need is just as important. Would that extra 15 Ice Damage from Cold Brain have given you the edge on your opponent, or perhaps getting back 25 health from Medkit would have kept your creature in battles just long enough to win? With the Freaky Creatures community Trading System, you can find what you need.

Once you have logged on to the Freaky Creatures community site, you can start trading to get just the power you're looking for. It all starts in the Trading menu, where trainers can view the master trade list and see what players are willing to trade their own powers for.

Don't see a trade you like? Then, it is time to set one up for yourself. Just select "Create a Trade" and you are on your way. Select up to five powers to offer that are not equipped to one of your creatures to offer, then pick up to 5 powers that you would like in return, set how long you would like the trade to be available, and you are ready to offer up your trade.

If another trainer decides to accept your trade, then the powers will be automatically transferred from you to them; and them to you.

COLLECTABILITY

How would you like to customize your action figures exactly the way you want?

Freaky Creatures gives collectors and video game players that ability. They get to make each one of the creatures they collect their own inside the Freaky Creatures Universe.

There are ten creatures to collect. What will your favorite be? Will it be the bird creature Hawkan, or the fire-based Setsa? Collect them all to find out, and unlock an eleventh virtual creature in the game.

MAY, DAUGHTER OF A GYM LEADER

Pokémon Coordinator Extraordinaire

By Sean Cooper

Name: May (English), Haruka (Japanese)

Name Etymology: May is the name of a month in spring. The “haru” part of Haruka means, “Spring”

Age: 10

Place of Origin: Petalburg City

Family Members: Norman (father), Caroline (mother), Max (brother)

Voice Actors/Actresses: Veronica Taylor (US; Season 1-8), Michele Knotz (US; Season 8+), Kaori Suzuki (Japan)

Ambitions: To be the world's top Pokémon Coordinator

First Appearance: Episode 277, Get the Show on the Road

LIVING IN A GYM LEADER'S SHADOW

Being the daughter of a gym leader, most expect May to follow in her father's footsteps – that couldn't be any further from the truth! When May first embarks on her Pokémon journey, instead of being interested in Pokémon like her brother Max, she's petrified of them. Instead of viewing her journey as an opportunity to gain experience and one day become a gym leader like her father, she's more excited about traveling in order to go shopping and eat tons of great food. Wait a second, this doesn't sound like the daughter of a gym leader!

A CHANGE IN ATTITUDE

It doesn't take long for May's indifference towards Pokémon to change; after bonding with her first Pokémon, Torchic, she begins to grow fonder of Pokémon. After seeing her first Pokémon Contest in the Pokémon Advanced episode All Things Bright and Beautifully!, May's excited and decides that her dream is to become a top Pokémon Coordinator by visiting the various regions to collect Contest Ribbons before eventually competing in the Grand Festival. After May has that goal in mind, she becomes motivated to train that much harder and learn more about Pokémon in order to one day realize her dream.

May progresses a lot over the years from a girl who dislikes Pokémon to one of the top Coordinators in the world. Known as the "Princess of Hoenn" for her achievements at the Hoenn Grand Festival, May is a determined Coordinator who, win or lose, will continue until she achieves her dream. The transformation of May is remarkable – she went from not even knowing the attacks of her Torchic to being one of the top competitors in the Hoenn Grand Festival. May meets many fellow Coordinators along the way that help and hinder her chances: Drew, Harley, and Solidad to name a few. After her defeat in the Kanto region Grand Festival, May embarks on a new Pokémon journey in Johto to compete and perhaps win the Johto Grand Festival.

MAY'S FAVORITE POKÉMON

May's favorite Pokémon is without a doubt her starter Pokémon, Torchic. May acquires Torchic in the Pokémon Advanced episode Get the Show on the Road!, when Professor Birch entrusts it to her as her starter Pokémon. Torchic plays a pivotal role in May becoming accustomed to Pokémon – she first chose Torchic due to its cuteness, but later on she learns to utilize its power and strength despite its small stature. It's interesting to watch the transformation of Torchic as it grows from a frightful weak Pokémon who cowers in fear, to a Pokémon not scared to dish out some punishment to the villainous Team Rocket. After evolving into Combusken and then its final evolution Blaziken, it remains arguably May's most powerful and loyal Pokémon.

May's second favorite Pokémon is Munchlax, a Pokémon with a big appetite – as its name implies. May acquires Munchlax in the Pokémon Advanced Battle episode, Berry Berry Interesting, when it's the only Pokémon willing to try her homemade Pokéblocks known as "May's Purple Surprise." Munchlax is the perfect Pokémon to test May's skills as a Pokémon trainer, as it can often be a handful for her to manage with its habit of wandering around in search of food for its voracious hunger. Personally, I really like Munchlax, although it's disappointing and surprising that May doesn't use it at the Hoenn Grand Festival.

May's third favorite Pokémon is her Glaceon, the Ice evolution of Eevee. May acquires a Pokémon egg, in the Hoenn episode May's Egg-Cellent Adventure, as a gift for helping a young trainer. A few episodes later in the episode Time-Warp Heals All Wounds, the egg finally hatches into an Eevee. We don't see much of Eevee in action, although it does defeat Brock's Marstomp to help May capture the Gardenia Ribbon. I really like May with her egg and then her Eevee because it shows the caring and maternal side to May. It's also fun to speculate which Eevee evolution May would go with it. I'm happy May selects Glaceon, one of the new Eevee-lutions, although it's disappointing to see it lose in its anime debut to Dawn at the Wallace Cup.

MAY'S BEST EPISODES

My favorite May episode is the Hoenn episode Get the Show on the Road!, her debut episode in the anime. I like how this episode starts out by introducing May, who is riding along on her bike before being spooked by a Ghost Pokémon. This episode reminds me a lot of when Ash receives Pikachu because May getting her first Pokémon is anything but easy. It's neat how the episode is divided into two parts between Ash and May – it's cool when they finally meet for the first time and May decides to tag along with Ash on his adventure. To add the cherry on top, Pikachu ruins May's bike – this episode couldn't be any better!

My second favorite May episode is the Hoenn episode All Things Bright and Beautifully! This episode is very important since May is inspired to become a top Pokémon Coordinator after seeing her first Pokémon Contest. It's exciting and neat to see how the anime writers portray Pokémon Contests from the game – it's odd though that the usual Pokémon Contest host, Vivian, is nowhere to be found. This episode marks the introduction of one of my favorite characters in the anime: the president of the Pokémon Fan Club, Mr. Sukizo – all I have to say is, "Remarkable!" I find it funny how the trainer's Beautifully seems to have a fondness with landing on May's head, much to her chagrin – it's a neat precursor to a few episodes down the road when May herself gets a Wurmple, which eventually becomes a Beautifully.

The Hoenn episode A Cacturne for the Worse, is my third favorite May episode. This episode introduces my favorite and the most flamboyant rival, a Pokémon Coordinator named Harley. Harley is anything but normal – he becomes enraged with May when she doesn't appreciate his gift of cookies enough. Harley is such a funny character – it's nice to see a Pokémon Coordinator similar to Team Rocket, who doesn't play by the rules. May impresses me in this episode because despite being embarrassed in front of all the spectators at the Pokémon Contest, she manages to prevail and defeat Harley to capture a Contest Ribbon.

MAY ALL YOUR DREAMS COME TRUE

Despite losing to Dawn at the Wallace Cup, May remains one of the top Pokémon Coordinators in the world – she will always be a top contender at the Grand Festival. As I mentioned with Ritchie in last month's article, it's a shame that the Pokémon Chronicles episodes are no longer in production – it would be interesting to see what May is up to right now in the Johto region with Drew, Harley, and Solidad. Perhaps one day down the road May and Dawn will have their much-anticipated rematch to see who is indeed the top female Pokémon Coordinator – now that's a battle I would like to see!

Slow Down, Centipede: Real-Life

GIRATINA

By Lora Shinn

Does a centipede really have 100 legs?

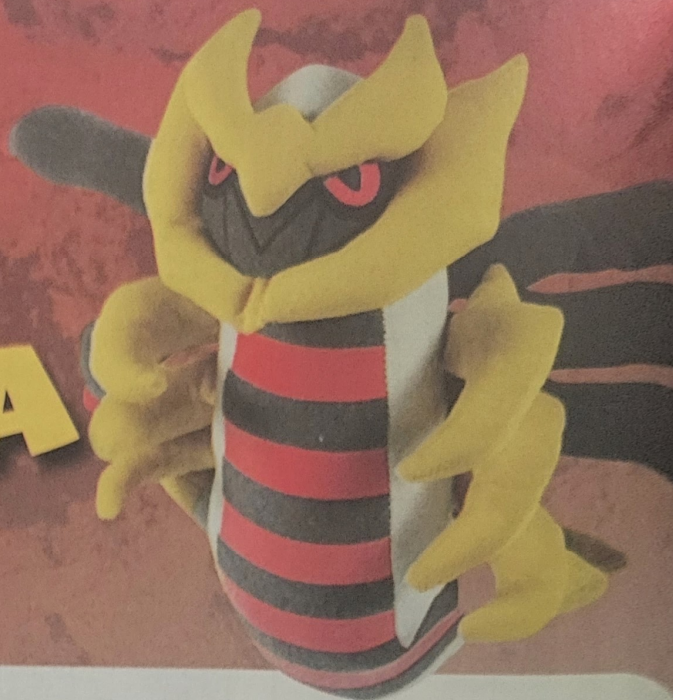

Some do, but most don't. A centipede's body is made up of multiple sections, or segments, each of which has two legs. Centipedes can have between 15 to 191 segments – so between 30 to 382 legs.

So it's not a bug, right?

That's right. Insects have six legs. Centipedes are arthropods, cousins to insects. They have an exoskeleton, or a hard, external skeleton, like insects. Like their creepy-crawly cousins, centipedes have jointed legs.

Where do centipedes live?

Centipedes love living near water sources, so their exoskeleton won't dry out. They can live in forests, savannah, forest and even desert – as long as a source of moisture is nearby. That's why it's normal to find a common household centipede in your bathtub.

Agh! In my bathtub?

Yes. The common household centipede can be found in bathtubs and near other moist, dark locations, such as under your sink or in a wet woodpile. These centipedes are harmless and prefer to eat cockroaches, bedbugs, silverfish, termites and other home pests. It kills its prey by injecting it with poison. And it has a neat defense mechanism – a household centipede's rear legs look like antennae, so an animal trying to attack the creature's "head" will only come away with a few of the centipede's detachable legs.

So should I tell my mom not to kill it?

Probably. But if she wants it to go outside, put on gloves first so it won't pinch you. The pinch won't kill you, but it might sting or burn, and if you're allergic to bee stings, the centipede's pinch could hurt you badly. And get ready to run, to catch a centipede. These little buggers are among the fastest arthropods alive.

How can I tell if it's a centipede or a millipede?

Centipedes have one pair of legs per segment, while millipedes have two pairs – four legs per segment. Centipedes primarily protect themselves through a poison-packed pinch. But millipedes can really stink up a place, if cornered by a predator. They emit a foul stench that says:

"Don't eat me. I smell like a toilet. Not yummy." Centipedes are carnivorous, while millipedes eat decaying plants.

What's the largest centipede in the world?

Scolopendra gigantea, or the Amazonian giant centipede, can grow up to 12 inches (one foot) long, about as long as this magazine from top to bottom. It eats bats, mice and even tarantulas. This mighty centipede could be the closest to Giratina in size and strength.

What color are centipedes?

Most centipedes are brown, black, or reddish. But the Common Desert Centipede, which lives in the U.S. Southwest, can be orange with black stripes – it looks like a tiger-striped centipede.

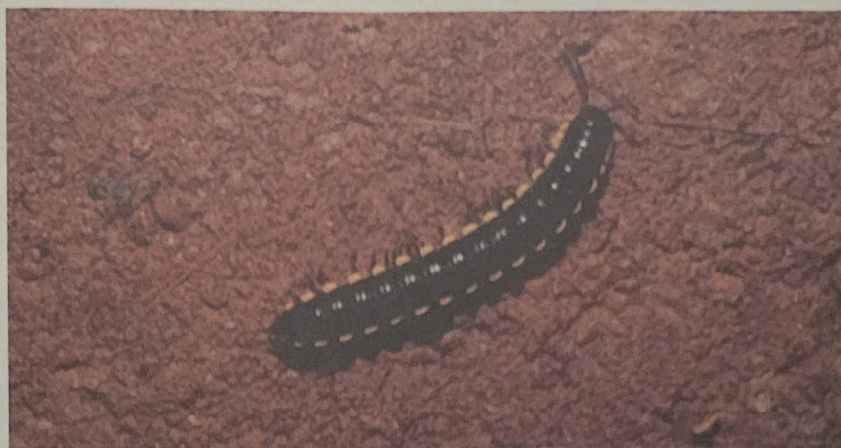

Which animals eat centipedes? What do centipedes eat?

Bugs, snakes and birds think a centipede looks like lunch on the run. Most centipedes eat smaller bugs, with the exception of the hungry Amazonian giant centipede.

Can centipedes kill a person?

That Amazonian giant centipede packs a powerful ouch. This predator's claws deliver a poisonous package that can cause chills, fever and weakness. However, most people won't die from a centipede's jab, unless they're allergic.

Can I keep a centipede for a pet?

mice. Centipedes can live up to six years, if you don't overfeed them.

DEWGONG!

THE COW OF THE SEA!

By Alex Lucard

It's pretty obvious where the Pokémon Seel gets its name from – the aquatic mammal known as the seal. Spheal is also based off of a seal and its evolutions Sealeo and Walrein are based off of sea lions and walruses, respectively. Then there is Dewgong. It might surprise you to learn that there is, in fact, a real animal species that shares this name, albeit with a different spelling. The Dugong, which are sometimes confused with their cousins the manatee, are one of only four species left from the Sirenia order of mammals. Because the dugong is such a little known and threatened species, it's important that we take a look at them while we still can.

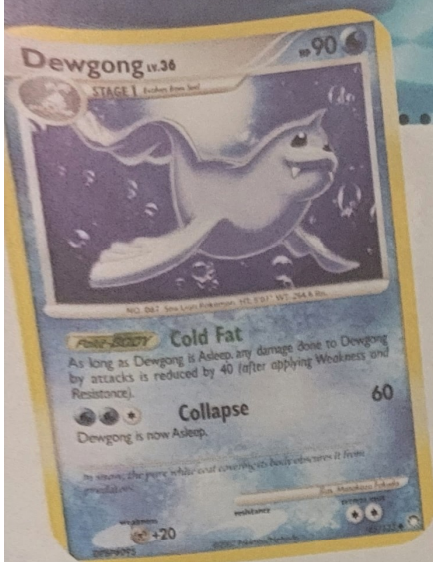

The dugong was first discovered in 1776 by a German zoologist named Philipp Ludwig Statius Müller. Müller made a mistake by classifying the Dugong as a member of the manatee genus. This classification would be further refined by scientists such as Bernard Germain de Lacépède (who gave them their own type species), the British Zoologist John Edward Gray (who gave the dugong their own family and who was also the world's first stamp collector), and George Gaylord Simpson (who gave the dugong their own subfamily and also created the theory of quantum evolution). Don't feel bad for Müller though; when Pokémon was first brought stateside, the localization team was unaware that Dewgong was patterned after a dugong either. They thought dugong was meant to be a manatee as well, and in fact the name in the beta stages of Pokémon Red/Blue/Green/Yellow was "Manaty"! However, this was an understandable mistake as so few English speakers outside of Australia have seen or heard of the dugong, and once it was realized that dugong and manatees are very similar but still distinct creatures, the name of this Ice/Water dual type Pokémon was changed. The word dugong, in case you are curious, comes from an Australian language spoken in the Philippines known as Tagalog. Tagalog is spoken by 22 million people worldwide; in Tagalog, dugong means, "lady of the sea."

The average dugong weighs between 500 and 1,000 pounds and they can grow between eight and ten feet in length. Dugong are not very social animals, and they prefer to be alone with their mate, or in a small group. Still, there are herds of dugong out there in the ocean, although these tend to be rare cases. As a mammal, a dugong cannot breathe underwater and needs air in its lungs to survive. A dugong can hold its breath for up to six minutes. When it needs to breathe, the dugong balances on its tail and sticks its head out of the water.

Dugong can be found in the waters of 37 countries, although the majority of the species are found in the waters off Northern Australia. Unlike their cousins the manatee, which dwell in fresh water, the dugong are the only purely marine (salt-water) dwelling herbivore mammals. Dugong primarily feed on sea grasses, which is why they are almost always found in what is known as the benthic zone of the ocean. The benthic zone of the ocean begins at the shoreline and continues to the 200 meter deep area. The continental shelf (the earth at the bottom of the ocean) has a slow gradual decline until this depth, where the shelf then plunges deep into the ocean. Because dugong uproot sea grass for their food, they are sometimes referred to as "Sea Cows" for the way they graze. This is a nickname the dugong shares with the rest of their Sirenia order.

If you were ever to see a dugong, you would immediately notice the odd proportions of their bodies compared to other mammals. A dugong's body is described as being fusiform, which means that the middle or torso region of the body is the widest, while the head and tail end slowly taper (get narrower/thinner) as you get away from the center. Unlike other aquatic life forms, the dugong lacks the usual dorsal fin for stabilizing. They also lack any hind limbs. The only appendages the dugong has besides its tail are their forelimbs, which resemble paddles. These forelimbs are how a dugong steers itself and navigates through waters; they also lack nails (which most manatees have), so a dugong has a harder time digging than their cousins. A dugong swims at an average speed of ten miles an hour, which is quite slow compared to other aquatic life forms, which can lead to injury when they are in an area with lots of boats and careless drivers.

Like all mammals, dugong do indeed have hair, although it's very hard to see it.

A dugong's hair is very thick and coarse, but there is very little of it on their form. These hairs are used in the same way many mammals use their whiskers – as a way to check nearby environment and see what's touching them. As the dugong cannot see behind it, it can at least feel with their hairs if they are close to brushing up against something and what kind of material it is made out of. These hairs are known as vibrissae.

If you are ever unsure as to whether you are looking at a manatee or a dugong, just check the tail. A dugong has a fluked (horizontal tail fin) tail like a dolphin, whereas the manatee does not. The skull and teeth of these cousins are also different, but these would be harder to notice from a boat or in an observation tank unless you routinely studied aquatic mammals.

When dugong mate, the female dugong carries the fetus for thirteen months – a full quarter of a year longer than a human. A dugong can only give birth to a single baby at a time, so there is never a litter of babies. A few dugong twins have occurred, but these are so rare, they are almost unheard of. A dugong calf suckles on its mother for two years and it does not enter adulthood until it's 15 years old. Because dugong children take longer to reach maturity than nearly every other mammal save human beings, it is hard for a dugong to have more than a few babies in their lifetime. A parent dugong spends a great deal of time and energy raising their child, and in many ways, a dugong family is very similar to one that a human child would grow up in, except for the living in water and not having legs aspects.

The dugong are currently considered a threatened species. The Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species has made it either illegal to kill dugong, or severely restricts the killing and eating of these animals based on the size of the population of the animals. As well, dugong need fresh water to drink and as the amount of fresh water near marine channels dry up across the world, this puts the dugong at further risk. Although these gentle creatures are protected everywhere they occur, the real problem are the dugong themselves. They have a lifespan of about seventy years and they produce so few offspring over their lives, that even the loss of a single baby by a hunter, accident, or animal attack can be devastating to the population. There are only six dugong in captivity worldwide, and attempts to breed these dugong have failed. It's unknown how, if at all, the dugong can be saved. At least we can currently take solace in the fact they aren't an endangered species – yet.

NEW PLAY CONTROL!

CAN YOU RALLY THE PIKMIN TO FIND THE MISSING PIECES?

By Michael Lucas
and Alex Jensen

TITLE: PIKMIN
PUBLISHER: NINTENDO
PLATFORM: NINTENDO WII
RELEASE DATE: NOW AVAILABLE
PLAYERS: 1 PLAYER
RATED: E FOR EVERYONE

Pikmin was praised as one of Nintendo's best new games when it was released in 2001, and it was widely acclaimed for its originality, creativity, and fun gameplay. It was considered one of the Gamecube's best titles and enjoyed impressive sales. The re-release on the Wii still provides hours of entertainment, and even though it may lack some of that first play-through magic, it is still a worthwhile experience for returning Pikmin fans and definitely recommended for first-time players.

The story is fairly simplistic, but manages to give more than enough motivation to keep the player moving forward. Captain Olimar of the Hocotate Freight Company is flying out in space when his rocket has a close encounter with a rogue asteroid, and the next thing he knows, he has to make an emergency landing on a nearby inhabited planet. His landing goes less than smoothly though; when he enters the planet's atmosphere, 30 parts break off of his ship and scatter for miles around the area where he came down. Even more frightening is the oxygen in this world's atmosphere, which is toxic to his race. His space suit only has 30 days worth of air, so he has to find as many of the missing parts as possible within 30 days before the air runs out.

When he recovers from his wild landing, he encounters the small plant-like creatures from which the game derives its name. The Pikmin follow him around willingly and obey his every command, and he discovers that he can use nearby food pellets to grow more of them. Once he grows enough, he finds that they can carry parts of his ship back to the landing site for him, and once he recovers the engines for his craft he can at least take off, fly around the atmosphere of the planet to continue searching for his missing parts, and escape the ravenous creatures that stalk the planet's surface hungrily at night.

During the course of the game, Olimar encounters three different kinds of Pikmin. The very first kind he finds at his initial landing site is the reds, which have the greatest fighting strength and are immune to fire damage. Since it turns out there are plenty of wild creatures that are more than eager to eat Olimar and his band of Pikmin, their strength comes in very handy. You'll also discover several different sources of flaming death to get through – everything from flaming monsters to jets of fire shooting out of the ground, which would roast the other two types of Pikmin alive.

The second type of Pikmin is blue, whose combat strength is less than that of the reds, but are the only type of Pikmin in the game that can swim. Once again, the world provides plenty of this type of hazard for Olimar to trek through, including an entire level that's almost fully submerged in water. Plenty of ship parts vital to Olimar's escape are located in or behind pools of water, so the proper use of a team of blues is vital to completing the game.

The third and final type of Pikmin Olimar discovers is yellow. The yellow Pikmin are once again not as strong as the reds in combat, but are immune to another surprisingly common hazard in the game: electricity. Later in the game, Olimar encounters old artificial ruins that eerily resemble objects that are found on Earth; he encounters everything from giant man-hole covers as wide as a house to still live electrical wires that emit arcs of searing electricity. Not only does this give the yellow Pikmin a good use, but also hints a little bit at the true nature of the planet that Olimar has landed on.

MANAGING YOUR PIKMIN

As the game progresses, it becomes necessary that the player manages all three types of Pikmin well, since due to the Gamecube's original hardware limitations, only 100 Pikmin can be out in the field at any given time, including those that are still planted and growing. Many times the player is forced to decide how many of each type will be necessary to have in the party to succeed in a level, since the three different types of hazards can be mixed often in various devious ways. Oftentimes obstacles such as an electric gate can be located in areas that are almost totally surrounded by water, leading to initial player frustration and then a beautiful 'ah-ha!'

moment as he or she figures out how to reach the obstacle with yellows via a tricky-to-find-and-navigate side path.

The boss battles in this game are surprisingly well-crafted; the creatures you battle are just large and intimidating enough to create a wonderfully menacing atmosphere, but not so much that it makes the encounters feel hopeless and impossible to win. Up until the final boss, each big nasty falls just beautifully into that sweet spot range of intense difficulty with a shining sliver of hope of victory. Surprisingly enough, the final boss isn't mandatory either; he only guards one ship part – which is optional to Olimar's safety and would not prevent him from escaping – so the player only needs to go through that battle if he or she is aiming for the perfect 100% clear ending.

The game's different endings provide just enough incentives to tempt more hardcore players into going for that 100% clear with all 30 ship parts without making a less serious player feel as if they're being punished by the game for not completing it in its entirety.

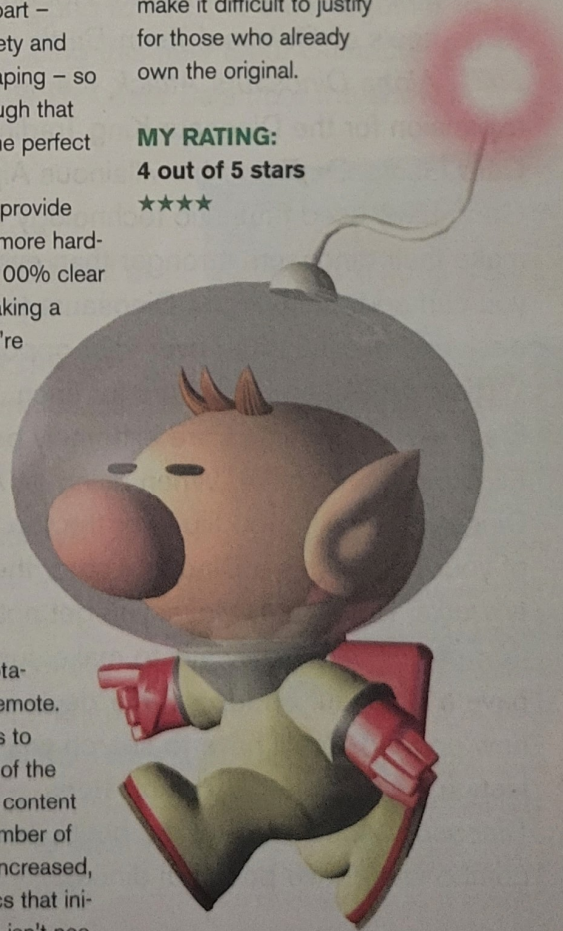

One of the few disappointing things to note about this re-release on the Wii is that it has very few differences from the original on the Gamecube. The actual game itself remains completely unchanged, with the only new feature being the adaptation of the controls to the Wii Remote. There are no graphical overhauls to make the game take advantage of the Wii's capabilities, no new game content whatsoever, and the allowed number of Pikmin on the field hasn't even increased, even though it was system specs that initially held this back. This release isn't necessarily a bad thing though as it can help new fans of the series get into it without having to go hunt down a Gamecube version of the game if they don't have one.

The control enhancements are worth pointing out; they are an incredible improvement over the Gamecube's control system. The point and throw system implemented with the Wii Remote feels much more logical and natural than the old analog stick that both controlled Olimar and where the aiming cursor pointed on the screen. In the old system, player movements and actions were fairly restricted by the limitations caused by controlling more than one kind of action on the same stick. Now that movement can be controlled by the stick on the Wii Nunchuk and the pointing on the Wii Remote's pointer, players can now throw and move with a full range of motion.

Overall, the game is a fun and gripping experience for those who have never bought or played it before. The unchanged game mechanics and lack of upgrades, however, may make it difficult to justify for those who already own the original.

HUNTIK

LEGENDARY SAGA

THE LEGENDARY SAGA STARTS

By Dan Scheidegger

If you've played the Huntik trading card game, you know that every game is an adventure. You don't just play to battle the opponent; you get to compete in over 15 different Missions with nearly 100 different Titans and Seekers that you can put in your deck. With so many different missions, powers, and ways to win in Huntik, you still probably haven't enjoyed them all.

If you think you have, or if you're excited to try Huntik, the adventure is about to get better in June with the second Huntik booster pack:

Legendary Saga! There are 95 new cards to collect in Legendary Saga, including five new missions to embark on and powerful new Legendary Titan cards.

Legendary Titans are much more powerful than other hero cards. They have more attack and defense and stronger special powers. The Legendary Titans are so strong that you first need the Titan's amulet card to play it.

Amulet cards are gold – not red or blue – so you can use them in a Good or Evil deck. Some might work better with Good and some with Evil, but you have the freedom to try these powerful Titans with any type of deck.

The legendary heroes don't go in your deck; just keep them to the side until you can play the matching amulet. You play an amulet when it's your turn just like you would play an action card. Follow the instructions on the amulet and then put it in your discard pile.

There are four different Legendary Titans, and you may have seen some on the Huntik TV show already. There is Tao, the Legendary Titan of Spirit; Behemoth, the Legendary Titan of Body; and Araknos, the Legendary Titan of Mind. You'll have to find the last one in packs of Legendary Saga to find out just how strong it is.

Get your first packs of Legendary Saga at a Sneak Preview event on May 23rd. When you enter you'll get new packs of Legendary Saga before it's found in stores, and you may win other cool Huntik items! Find out more about the Sneak Preview and a location near you by visiting www.huntik.com.
